ABOUT US

Project 100 is a global membership-based organization committed to creating social and environmental peace for all. It is a global network of influential leaders. The organization works towards fostering regenerative global development through international cooperation, commerce, diplomacy, and grassroots action.

At Project 100, we firmly believe that every important stakeholder has an innate desire to contribute to a better world and a thriving future. These influential individuals and powerful entities possess immense potential for impact, and our mission is to bring them together on a single platform. By channeling their efforts towards a collective mission, we aim to achieve social and environmental peace for all, fostering a world of harmony, prosperity, and sustainability.

GLOBAL NETWORK

OUR STORY

Under the leadership of Mr. Suraj Gaikwad, an environmentalist from India, Project 100 has been making significant strides since its inception in 2015. Mr. Gaikwad's journey with Project 100 began with organizing grassroots-level initiatives in India. He brandished his signature green reporter mic and engaged in interviews with major stakeholders. The idea of bringing these stakeholders together on a platform to discuss critical issues sparked momentum for the larger cause.

Over the past eight years, Project 100 has created numerous local, national, and global platforms, providing stakeholders with opportunities to contribute to the larger discourse of the world. From its humble beginnings of community-led initiative, the organization has evolved into a dynamic force for social and environmental change. The Project 100 team's unwavering commitment has inspired countless people to join this transformative journey.

GLOBAL IMPACT

Social Peace goes beyond the absence of war, encompassing nurturing conditions for individuals to realize their full potential. It addresses discrimination, economic disparities, and limited access to healthcare and education, ensuring inclusive decision-making. Overlooked in peace discussions is the crucial aspect of humans respecting the environment and coexisting harmoniously with nature.

Environmental Peace transcends human relations to embrace connections among all living beings and systems, fostering collective well-being. Including this component is crucial not only because future conflicts will stem from disputes over dwindling natural resources but also because environmental and social factors are deeply intertwined. Peace is unattainable unless the complete cycle is functional. Without a safe and nurturing environment and access to natural resources, there is always a divide and deprivation.

Uniting these elements, we view Social and Environmental Peace (SEP) as one concept. Project 100 advocates a regenerative approach as the foundation for SEP, emphasizing the continual restoration and renewal of resources, ecosystems, and communities. SEP actively promotes a healthier environment, ensures fairness, and boosts economic prosperity for all.

IN AFFILIATION WITH

IN PARTNERSHIP WITH

Dear Esteemed Colleagues and Global Visionaries,
With utmost gratitude and a sense of profound privilege, I extend my heartfelt appreciation to each of you. The journey that leads us to the pages of this brochure is not merely a collection of words, but a testament to the transformative power of unity, learning, and cultural exchange.

Having had the honor of steering the ship at the Indian Council for Cultural Relations (ICCR) under the Ministry of External Affairs, I've witnessed firsthand the remarkable bridge that cultural exchange can build between nations and communities. Through this prism, I've seen how the threads of art, knowledge, and tradition weave connections that defy geographical divides, creating bonds that echo through generations

As an academician who has been entrusted with the responsibility of nurturing young minds, I understand the pivotal role of education in shaping the trajectory of societies. Learning, beyond its conventional confines, is a beacon that guides communities towards growth, understanding, and the unison of diverse ideas.

In Project 100, I find a reflection of these ideals – a collective journey that doesn't merely seek change but embodies a cultural and systemic shift. It's a convergence of visionary minds, a symphony of diverse perspectives, and an opportunity to propel our shared dreams toward reality. In this endeavor, the seeds we sow today will bear the fruits of a harmonious and progressive tomorrow.

Let us not just be witnesses, but active participants in this transformative narrative. I invite each of you to become an integral part of this journey, where culture, education, and collaboration form the bedrock of a future we collectively craft. Our world is poised at a crossroads, and together, we hold the power to choose a path that transcends boundaries, unites communities, and leaves an indelible mark on the tapestry of humanity, guided by the timeless principle of Vasudev Kutumbhakam.

With profound gratitude and shared purpose,

Dear Fellow Advocates of Change,

In the course of my journey as an academician, scientist and an advocate for environmental stewardship, I've been privileged to witness the world from multiple perspectives. From the intricacies of chemistry to the grandeur of academia, and the complexities of government. The realization that our actions, whether on a molecular level or on a global scale, have consequences, drives my commitment to the cause of Project 100.

This initiative transcends the boundaries of disciplines and nationalities, uniting us in a common purpose - to create a world where the well-being of our planet is intertwined with the well-being of all its inhabitants.

As someone who has delved deep into the science of our environment and worked on the frontlines of pollution control, I've seen both the challenges we face and the solutions that are within our grasp. Project 100 embodies the spirit of collaborative action, an ethos that I wholeheartedly believe in. It is a platform for change-makers, a testament to the power of unity, and a beacon of hope for a better tomorrow.

This journey is not just about planting trees; it's about sowing the seeds of change. It's about nurturing a legacy of global peace and environmental harmony that future generations will inherit. It's about bridging divides, fostering understanding, and creating a world where our shared aspirations flourish.

I invite you to be a part of this extraordinary endeavor. Together, we can turn our insights into actions and our actions into a legacy that resonates through time and memorial.

With heartfelt thanks and a fusion of ideals,
